Re: Announcement of Sponsorship of UDLL
Date: July 14, 2006

I am pleased to announce that Marvin Windows and Doors will participate as sponsor the Universal Design Living Laboratory (UDLL).

Universal Design is no longer a concept to be considered only by the physically challenged or those looking to age in place, but is a full-fledged planning methodology that is gaining momentum with building professionals and architects. The UDLL will be a living and evolving showcase for those who seek the best practices in human centered design and accessibility solutions.

Rosemarie Rossetti and her husband, Mark Leder, shared the mission for the UDLL with me earlier this year. During that conversation I was able to learn about all of the great promotional activities they have planned and more importantly, about their passion and commitment to make the UDLL a cutting-edge resource that will serve the advancement of universal design well into the future.

Sincerely,
